

Communication Design

The Communication Design program at Geneva aims to teach students to apply the principles of effective communication to fine art practice to create meaningful, constructive, and beautiful designs that serve the needs of people and organizations. Study communication design from a Biblical perspective—by emphasizing the imago dei, or image bearers of God, Geneva's program teaches students an inclusive, accessible design process that considers the needs of all people.

This program teaches artists and designers to practice their craft for a lifelong mission in service to God and neighbor.
