

Psychology

Geneva's Psychology program provides students with opportunities to think deeply from both a theoretical and practical perspective within the discipline and in the context of Biblical Christianity. Content areas we explore include cognitive, behavioral, social, physical, and spiritual dimensions of the person, and the student is given time to make application to their world.

The programs are research and theory based but include opportunities for practical experience and professional skill training. Students can expect to be challenged both in the classroom and in the field by faculty who care about their professional and personal development and assist them in their future career and service.
